Truck grub fascination showcased at foodie fest

Huge turnout at yesterday's mobile food event Celebration proves there is a loyal following of the emerging gourmet food truck industry

COURTNEY SACCO/METRO

People waited for nearly an hour for a taste.

The Flower Girls Baking Company served up pastries and doughnuts.

Two years ago, food trucks were a rare find on Boston's streets. But those days might as well be ancient history as the practice of serving up gourmet meals on wheels has virtually exploded since then.

The success of the Hub's food truck industry was evidenced in the 5,000 foodies gathered at UMass Boston yesterday, some of whom waited as long as 45 minutes for their tiny paper baskets of delicious-smelling cuisine from some of the region's most acclaimed food trucks.

"This is not a fad, it's a trend," said Janet Prensky, of Food Truck Festivals of New England. "Food trucks are literally hot right now, and I think people are catching on, and it's here to stay."

Prensky said it is not only the convenience of grabbing a bite on the go, but also the quality and variety of truck food that has people drooling.

Quoted

"After my wife and I retired, I said, 'I don't want to get another pizzeria, I'd rather just put it on the road.'" CECCHINELLI

The food truck festival brought together 27 of the biggest food trucks in the region, from Boston's own Lobsta Love to Bite into Maine, both slinging cool crustacean meat into toasty buns. To round out the menu, the festival offered other eclectic fare, like crispy cauliflower, pulled pork sliders, grilled cheese, ribs, some sweets from Cup Cake Mojo and Italian Ice.

For $35, festival-goers were able to sample any of the trucks they wanted.

Brian Carey brought his family up from Cape Cod for the festival and, although he does not typically have access to food trucks, he said he understands the allure.

"If I worked in the city, I think it would be appealing. Instead of going out to lunch, I wouldn't object to going to a food truck, especially one of these here today. Some of the food on these trucks is fantastic," he said, adding his favorite was Big Moe's M&M Ribs.

"When I was living in Arizona, truck cuisine was really popular," said Jill Carreiro, who stopped by the festival with her family. "You could go and get really great, unique food. I've finally started to see that happening here in Boston," she said.

Her family's consensus on the best food was Lefty's Silver Cart. The goat cheese, truffle dressed greens and fig jam baguette show that some of the trucks can cater to Boston's refined palates.

Joe Cecchinelli, owner of Franca's Wood Fired Pizza, slid a piping hot pizza in and out of his mobile oven yesterday, offering his patrons a glimpse at what he had to offer.

A longtime pizza professional, Cecchinelli said that selling slices from a truck has served him well.

"After my wife and I retired, I said, 'I don't want to get another pizzeria, I'd rather just put it on the road,'" he said. "It's convenient, and people love to eat outside."

Truck stops

Where to go for some truck grub:

- Copley Square at Stuart and Trinity Place
- China Trade Building at Boylston Street — next to the outdoor plaza in front of the China Trade building and across from the Registry of Motor Vehicles.
- Financial District, on the corner of Milk and Kilby.
- South End at Tremont Street and Berkeley Streets adjacent to the Benjamin Franklin Institute.

Did you know?

- Mayor Thomas M. Menino has been a strong proponent of the food truck movement in Boston. Last summer, he launched the Mayor's Food Truck Challenge, inviting local entrepreneurs to present their food truck menus and concepts for a chance to operate on City Hall Plaza, as well as financial support from the city.
- Smithsonianmag.com named Clover Food Lab in Cambridge among the top 20 best food trucks in the nation.

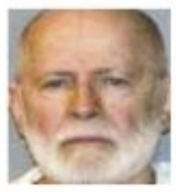
Greig's fate to be decided tomorrow



The longtime girlfriend of alleged fugitive mob boss James "Whitey" Bulger will be sentenced tomorrow on federal charges and prosecutors want her to spend a decade in jail for harboring the fugitive.

Prosecutors from the U.S. Attorney's office want Catherine Greig, 61, to spend 120 months in jail and pay a $150,000 fine. She pleaded guilty in March to conspiracy to harbor a fugitive, conspiracy to commit identity fraud and identity fraud.

Judge Douglas Woodlock will sentence Greig during a hearing in federal court tomorrow morning that is expected to be filled with members of the media, family members of Bulger's alleged victims, interested attorneys and Greig's sister, Margaret McCusker, who has appeared in court for most of the hearings.

In their sentencing memorandum filed Friday, prosecutors said the potential deterrent effect of Greig's sentence is high.

"High-profile defendants such as Bulger require substantial assistance if they are to remain fugitives," prosecutors said in the memo. "Individuals in a position such as Greig must know that there is a high price to be paid for choosing personal affection and loyalty over their legal obligations."

- He has pleaded not guilty to the federal indictment that charges him with various crimes including involvement in 19 murders.
- His lawyer has requested to push back the November trial because of the massive amount of evidence defense lawyers have had to sift through, but a judge has refused to move the date.

Auburn footballers shot dead at party

Two former Auburn University football players and another man were shot dead and three people including a current player were wounded when an argument at a pool party at an off-campus apartment complex escalated, police said yesterday.

Two of those shot to death, Edward Christian and Ladarious Phillips, both 20, played for Auburn previously. A current member of the team, Eric Mack, also 20, was wounded and admitted to East Alabama Medical Center. His condition was not released.

The third fatality was Demario Pitts, 20, police said.

Auburn Police Chief Tommy Dawson identified the suspect as 22-year-old Desmonte Leonard of Montgomery, Alabama's capital, and said he was being sought on three counts of capital murder.

Leonard fled the scene in a white Chevrolet Caprice with two other men, who were considered "persons of interest," Dawson said, declining to identify them. The vehicle was found abandoned in nearby Macon County.

U.S. Marshals and the FBI were aiding the investigation, Dawson told a news conference.

Police received a call reporting shots fired at 10:03 p.m. Saturday and Christian was pronounced dead at the scene. The other two men fatally shot died at the hospital.

A fifth victim was treated and released. The sixth was airlifted to the University of Alabama-Birmingham Hospital with a gunshot wound to the head, Dawson said. He was in critical condition yesterday.

"This is a tragic day for the Auburn family," Mayor Bill Ham Jr. said. "It's just beyond my capacity to understand. It's senseless."

Lee County Sheriff Jay Jones said the county, which includes Auburn, typically suffers annual homicides "in the single digits."

"This is pretty much unprecedented," Jones said.

News in brief

No N. Korean nuke test 'at present'

NORTH KOREA. North Korea said it isn't planning to test a nuclear weapon "at present," releasing the denial on the day a U.S. envoy arrived in South Korea to discuss tensions on the Korean peninsula.

South Korea "seeks to rattle the nerves of the DPRK in a bid to cause it to conduct a nuclear test, though such a thing is not under plan at present," an unidentified Foreign Ministry spokesman said in a statement carried Saturday by the official Korean Central News Agency. DPRK refers to North Korea's official name, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

South Korea has no comment to make on the KCNA statement, the Unification Ministry's spokesman, Kim Hyung Suk, said yesterday. North Korea needs to "show its sincerity through dialogue and positive actions, not provocations," he said. BLOOMBERG

McDonald's sales drop in Asia

CHINA. Chinese consumers may be losing their appetite for American fast food.

On Friday, McDonald's Corp. reported that same-store sales fell 1.7 percent in Asia Pacific, the Middle East and Africa in May, the biggest decline since at least 2004.

The pullback at the world's largest restaurant chain coincides with a slowing Chinese economy. That has forced McDonald's and Yum! Brands Inc., which runs the KFC and Pizza Hut chains, to fight back with less-expensive menu items, said Steve West, an analyst at ITG Investment Research in St. Louis.

"We've seen a lot of deep discounting by McDonald's and Yum," he said. "McDonald's has been talking about keeping that up in the face of pretty high inflation." BLOOMBERG

Romney living on 'different planet' on jobs

President Barack Obama's chief political strategist, David Axelrod, said Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney "is living on a different planet" because he opposes the Obama administration's plan to create more jobs for teachers, firefighters and policemen.

The administration is seeking to recover from a week of economic and political developments that put the president on the defensive and complicated his reelection campaign. These included a June 1 report that the unemployment rate increased in May, the failure of Democrats and unions in a recall vote against Republican Gov. Scott Walker in Wisconsin and accusations of leaking classified information on cyberattacks and drone strikes.

Obama also opened himself to Republican attacks by saying "the private sector is doing fine" during a White House news conference June 8. He later clarified his remarks. BLOOMBERG

A 'sense of belonging' found to be crucial to campus diversity

The numbers Dr. Terrell L Strayhorn points to are stark and, at the very least, troubling.

Here's just one example: Of the 18 million college students in the United States today, only about 3 percent of them are African-American men. Of those, a disproportionate amount of them attend nonselective institutions.

Since 2006, Strayhorn has been investigating diversity and inclusion in higher education, producing dozens of studies funded by the Department of Education, the National Science Foundation, Ohio State University and the University of Tennessee.

No matter his starting point — from LGBT groups to Latino men — Strayhorn found his research pointing to a crucial theme: the deeply ingrained desire of students to simply feel that they belong in their college environment.

▶ Strayhorn

This month Routledge will publish Strayhorn's "College Students' Sense of Belonging: A Key to Educational Success for All Students," representing the most comprehensive look at what is perhaps the most significant factor in educational diversity.

"This is not an esoteric construct just for college students. In fact, this a basic need that is expressed by Maslow. We really can't access higher order needs, like love and affection, without feeling this sense of belonging," says Strayhorn, from his office at the University of Ohio. "We've always thought of this as a kind of soft variable that you can't really measure, but I argue it can be measured quite consistently. And, when it is measured, it has a powerful influence on the kinds of outcomes all of us care about."

Strayhorn also argues that, largely, institutions have attempted to address this issue with ineffective, overly broad programs.

"This data gives me an opportunity to speak to the educational community: If our national imperative is to have more people get in and out of college, then we have to be very intentional about providing the kind of support students need," says Strayhorn. "That's not a broad-based one-shot approach. It needs to be specifically targeted."

A new scientific research award helps weed out goose eggs

The Golden Goose Awards can help direct tax dollars to research most likely to pay off ◗ Project has received bipartisan support ◗ From chemistry to neuroscience

In these days of tight government budgets, scientific research — much of it done at large universities — is under attack by belt-tightening politicians. Critics think that limited tax dollars should be spent on projects with clear payoffs.

"It's easy to be critical, and hard to see the long-term implications," says Steve Fluharty, senior vice provost for research at the University of Pennsylvania. "Research grants are low-hanging fruit."

He's excited about a new opportunity to highlight scientific work with valuable payoffs, as a member of a committee awarding Golden Goose Awards, which will be given to "projects with a good ROI [return on investment], that have a positive scientific, societal or economic impact," he explains.

Scientific associations, funding agencies and universities will nominate projects that have turned out to have significant long-term impact. "The success of any research has some unpredictability," says Fluharty, "but some discoveries can transform our understanding of life processes, energy, etc."

▶ Fluharty

"The success of any research has some unpredictability, but some discoveries can transform our understanding of life processes, energy, etc."
FLUHARTY

The eight members of the committee represent a variety of disciplines, including molecular biology, materials science, medicine and surgery, chemistry and physics, as well as Flaherty's own field, neuroscience.

The Golden Goose awards are the brainchild of Sen. Jim Cooper, a Democrat from Tennessee, and the project has gotten bipartisan support. "This is critically important at this time, as we face unprecedented cuts in funding for research," Fluharty says.

STOCKBYTE

Why study the sex lives of worms?

The award is named with a nod to the Golden Fleece Awards, which the late Sen. William Proxmire gave to highlight what he regarded as silly research.

One of Proxmire's Golden Fleeces went to scientists researching the sex life of screwworms. It turns out that the screwworm is a deadly cattle pest, and the research ultimately saved the American cattle industry billions of dollars. Sen. Proxmire eventually apologized for calling the research a waste of money.

Lindsay Lohan's car crash still happening

Lindsay Lohan got into a nasty car accident in L.A. during the weekend, and because this is Lindsay Lohan, things are far from over.

The actress, who was driving, initially claimed that an 18-wheeler cut off her black Porsche, causing her to slam into the back of it and total her car.

We're not sure if the photos of the damage match up to this story — we're not even sure we've ever seen a car this expensive before — but the driver of the truck tells TMZ that Lohan, who was speeding, caused the crash, then attempted to leave the scene while her assistants negotiated a bribe and removed her belongings from the car. "I'd already called 911 because they were trying to get away from the scene," the truck driver tells the site. "But they packed a bag and then the [assistant] told me, 'Don't mention the bag to the cops.'"

Lindsay, for her part, is sticking with her original story, but yesterday also floated the idea that the brakes on the Porsche, which was a rental, were recently replaced and failed.

Lindsay, we realize you did not have a normal adolescence, so allow us to explain how this works: When you irresponsibly smash up an expensive car that isn't yours, the correct response is to cry, call your mom and say "officer" a lot. Rinse and repeat as necessary.

Something we haven't seen, please

Madonna has never been one to put on a PG show. But her Thursday night concert in Istanbul made rolling around moaning in a wedding dress look subtle.

While performing her song "Human Nature," the 53-year-old — wearing some combination of fishnets and upscale suburban mall bondage — decided that fondling herself wasn't quite enough. At the end of perhaps the world's most choreographed, awkward striptease, the singer flashed the audience of 55,000 her right nipple before ending the song with her hand down her pants.

Is she still sexy? Of course. But she's now officially in the creepy aunt subsection.

Warning: Nude Snooki is lurking out there

"Jersey Shore" star Snooki seems to be the latest celebrity to get her phone hacked and, surprise, there were nude photos on there.

The pictures, which were first posted to the blog Egotastic, show her — or, if we're entertaining a really dark world, an impersonator — in a hotel room and appear to be at least six months old.

We can't decide what's more upsetting: That we've seen Snooki naked, or that we can estimate how long ago she was naked.

Talking points

McConaughey wedding ends with camping trip

Matthew McConaughey married Camila Alves, his girlfriend of six years and the mother of his two children, in a ceremony at their Texas home over the weekend, according to Us Weekly. The one-of-a-kind ceremony was followed by an all-night party, with guests staying in state-of-the-art tents set up on McConaughey's property. "It's definitely a campground, but they weren't exactly roughing it," the source explains. "They have showers, restrooms and air conditioning. It's very unique, high-end camping."

Jolie to sign on to 'Fifty Shades'?

The breakout erotic novel "Fifty Shades of Grey" may have found yet another fan with Angelina Jolie, who has reportedly been in talks to direct the film adaptation, according to Deadline. Sources say Jolie has had "a conversation or two" with Universal Pictures, the studio that won the rights to the smash book, though a source close to Jolie denies the story.

Baby Fox on the way

Megan Fox is definitely expecting, as she proudly showed off her growing baby bump while strolling around Los Angeles late last week, according to Us Weekly. This would be the first baby for Fox and husband Brian Austin Green, who also has a 9-year-old son from a previous relationship. "I want at least two, probably three," Fox told Cosmopolitan earlier this year when asked about kids.

'Bunheads'

DRAMA. Amy Sherman-Palladino, creator of "Gilmore Girls," does the small-town quaint 'n' quirky thing again with "Bunheads." The seaside town of Paradise, Calif., is populated with eccentric fast-talkers who are adjusting to the new girl in town — a former Vegas showgirl (Sutton Foster) who impulsively marries a guy whose mother runs the local dance studio, where the newbie begins to bond with the young "bunhead" ballerinas who have aspirations of dancing professionally. Series premiere, 9 p.m., ABC Family

'Hollywood Heights'

DRAMA. A girl (Brittany Underwood) wins a songwriting competition sponsored by a rock heartthrob (Cody Longo) in this teen soap opera based on a telenovela. But the most important thing you need to know is James Franco — yes, that James Franco — appears in a multi-episode arc as an eccentric movie mogul. Series premiere, 9 p.m., Nick at Nite

'Teen Wolf'

DRAMA. Scott tries to keep Derek from creating new werewolves. Because some people these days would much prefer to be turned into a vampire. 10 p.m., MTV

Dust and mud-filled Tennessee festival mixes rock, electro and the requisite jam bands for die-hard fans

▶ Skrillex kept the party going early Sunday morning at Bonnaroo.

Early Sunday morning, much of the most populated farm in Tennessee was lit up by the piercing beats of brostep king Skrillex. For just one long weekend, New York City had some unlikely competition for the "city that never sleeps": the Bonnaroo Music & Arts Festival.

Bonnaroo's strong suit is in its diversity — while the ever prevalent folkies got their fix from the banjo-totin' Trampled By Turtles, comedy lovers saw hot act Aziz Ansari and fans of female indie pop swooned to Feist's sweet voice. And that was just the docket for early evening on Friday.

While the first of the festival headliners didn't perform until Friday night, buzz rock band Alabama Shakes easily set the stage Thursday evening as lead singer Brittany Howard showcased her soulful voice.

On Friday, the first full day of the festival, it became apparent that only the most grizzled music aficionados frequent these dust and mud-filled fields. Merrill Garbus of tUnE-yArDs continued the string of edgy girl-fronted acts early afternoon, leading up to 'Roo faves The Avett Brothers and their catchy folk rock.

▶ Rapper (and "Community" star) Donald Glover, aka Childish Gambino, took the stage on Saturday.

After Feist showed her hippie spirit and Foster the People pumped up the jams, Radiohead took to the main stage for an admirable appearance.

Thom Yorke and his boys from Britain lived up to the hype, intermingling more jammy electro material from their latest release, "King of Limbs," with older hits like "Karma Police." "Where are you guys sleeping tonight?" front man Thom Yorke asked the crowd midway through the set. "In a field, face down in the mud? That's what we do in Britain."

Saturday was just as packed with must-see sets, showcasing electropop act Santigold, Donald Glover's solo rap act Childish Gambino, and a reunion of roots rock group Dispatch. Their well-known song "The General" was one of the best performances at Bonnaroo, starting a crowd-rousing sing-along.

Red Hot Chili Peppers and Phish headlined Saturday and Sunday, respectively, while another marquee highlight came from the Beach Boys' 50th anniversary set.

A tent city

Pass the guy hawking glass pipes, make a left at the pizza place and fall asleep on the corner of Walnut Drive and Northam Street — in a tent in the middle of a field.

The 70-plus camping areas that tens of thousands of music fans called home for four days created a temporary midsized city, complete with gridded streets, hundreds of food options and acres of makeshift stores selling clothes and goods. It's surprising that Bonnaroo city is only here for four days.

Tony Awards don't 'suck so much' for musical 'Once'

The 66th annual Tony Awards last night began with host Neil Patrick Harris speculating about life as a Broadway show: "What if everyone's diction were crisper, and everyone's secrets were shouted in a stage whisper?" He concluded: "If life were more like theater, life wouldn't suck so much." A big winner early in the night was "Once," which took away wins for Best Orchestration, Best Sound Design of a Musical, Best Book of a Musical and Best Direction of a Musical. To get the variable "go to" APR shown, you must obtain a credit line of $100,000-$750,000. The introductory APR will apply only during the first 12 billing cycles after your FlexLock line is opened. Thereafter, the APR, including the APR on any existing balance, will convert to the applicable variable "go to" APR. The "go to" APR on FlexLock lines may vary monthly based on the latest U.S. Prime Rate as published in The Wall Street Journal as of the first business day of the month, plus a margin of .74% (now 3.99% APR). Maximum APR is 18%. Minimum APR is 3.24%. After the introductory APR expires, the interest rate will increase by 0.25% if automatic payment is discontinued. How to trust your intuition

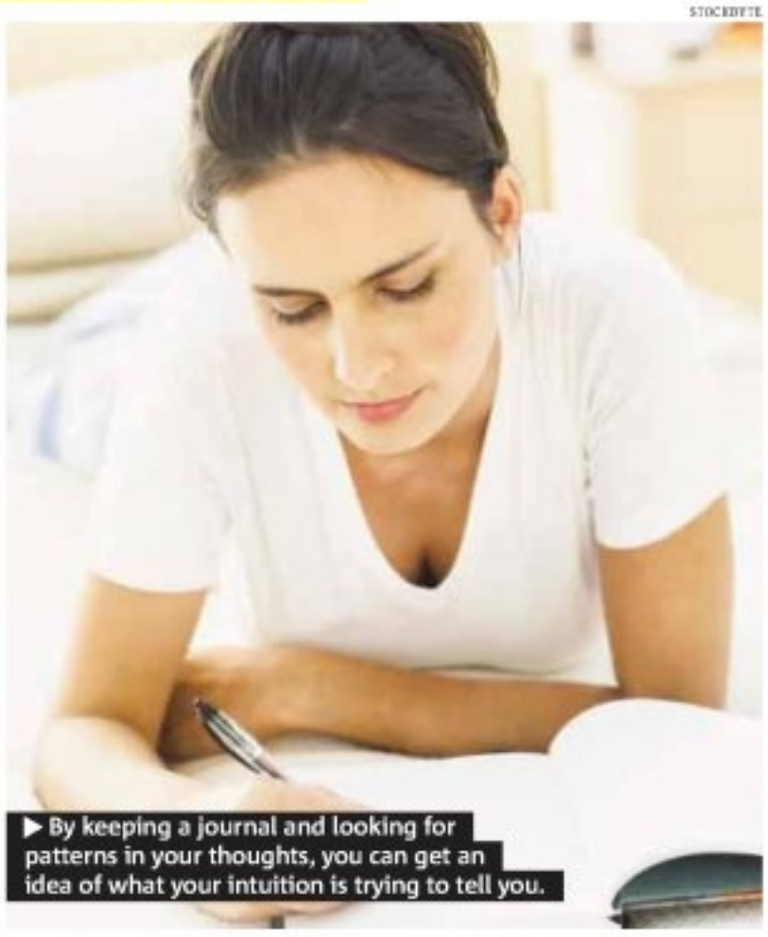
STOCKBYTE



▶ By keeping a journal and looking for patterns in your thoughts, you can get an idea of what your intuition is trying to tell you.

Zen in the city

GABRIELLE BERNSTEIN
WWW.GABBYB.TV

We all have the power of intuition working through us at all times. Our intuition is a kind, loving inner voice that guides us toward positive actions and peaceful outcomes. Often inspiration shows up as a strong gut knowing. Sometimes intuitive guidance comes through as a powerful feeling of inspiration or even a tingly sensation. We all have this inner guidance system, but many of us disconnect from it. If we want to trust our intuition we must release all disbelief and heighten our awareness of our inner voice.

How we block our intuition: The practical world around us doesn't support our creative capacity to connect to our inner guidance system. When we get hooked into our to-do lists and daily duties we lose track of our intuitive flow. Another block is fear. Whenever fear arises we cut off communication to our inner guide. Thoughts like "I can't" or "there's no way" block us from creative ideas and intuitive guidance. Then fear leads us to overthink and start future-tripping negative outcomes. All of these blocks disconnect us from our intuitive guide within.

How to clear the blocks: Releasing these blocks helps us realign with our intuition. We must awaken a practice of tuning in to our inner voice through meditation and stillness. You can begin this practice with two minutes of stillness each morning. Sit comfortably in silence and connect to your breath. Breathe in through your nose and out through your mouth. When two minutes are up take note of whatever your intuition tells you and write it in a notebook. Trust your first instinct. For one week, document the intuition that comes through after your two minutes of stillness. At the end of the week, reread what you've documented. It's likely that you'll see patterns and guidance that may not have come through without this stillness practice. Take this exercise into your day-to-day life: The more you practice listening to your intuition, the more you'll trust its loving guidance.

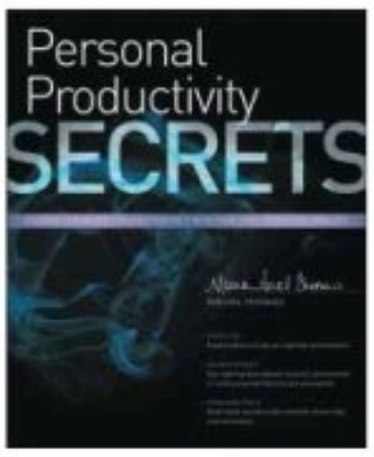
How 'airplane mode' can help keep you grounded

Is your smartphone actually making you less productive? Productivity guru Maura Nevel Thomas thinks so How to stay focused in a wireless world

Maura Nevel Thomas founded RegainYourTime.com over nine years ago. Her latest book, "Personal Productivity Secrets," is part of Wiley's "Secrets" series. Much of the book is devoted to navigating the pitfalls of wireless distractions.



Thomas

Why is the term "time management" outdated in your view?
Before we had so much technology — and the distractions caused by it — when you devoted your time to something, you could reasonably expect that that was the only task you were going to focus on. But now we all carry the world in our pocket. So it's not a given that just because you devote time to something you will have the experience you intended.

What if we are expected to keep our phones on in order to run our business — or even keep our job?
It's interesting that you phrased the question in terms of expectations, because that is what it's about. If people expect you to respond instantly, it's probably because you set that expectation yourself. If you typically respond to your e-mails immediately, then people will come to expect that you will respond to them immediately. So it's a matter of resetting the expectations. There are people whose jobs are about emergency response. Otherwise, being constantly reactive is detrimental to productivity.

Is it just a matter of turning off the phone?
There are many strategies. Really what it's about is making sure you control your technology instead of it controlling you. I know a lot of people who keep their phone on vibrate at all times. While you're valuing the idea of not interrupting someone else, you're still interrupting yourself every hour of the day. Personally, I like 'airplane mode.' You have access to the technology you need, but you're cut off from Internet activity.

A health care career may be close at hand

If you assume that a career in health care means either being a doctor or nurse, it's time you rethought the field. With advances in technology and medicine, plus the growth of the elderly population, the health care job market is only as limited as your imagination.

Stephanie Donovan, faculty chair of health programs at Peirce College in Philadelphia, suggests that job seekers go beyond the norm and look into what's known as allied health. "These roles can be described as the supportive patient services that complement medicine and nursing," she says. "According to the Association of Schools of Allied Health Professionals, some allied health professionals include dental hygienists, diagnostic medical sonographers, dietitians, medical technologists, occupational therapists, physical therapists and respiratory therapists."

DAVID DE LOSSY

Healing hands: Massage therapy is a growing health care profession.

Care navigators are people who assist in finding the proper path for aging patients. David Gruber, director of Research of the Healthcare Industry Group at Alvarez & Marsal, explains what that means. "Care navigator is a new position that will become essential to identify 'best in value' providers while facilitating care transitions between primary care physicians and specialists, as well as hospitals and discharge sites of care. They can also facilitate end-of-life care to ensure a high quality experience for all involved."

Employment of massage therapists is expected to grow by 20 percent from 2010 to 2020, faster than the average for all occupations.

Massage therapy is another unexpected career that makes the list. "The U.S. Department of Labor has deemed massage a positive outlook profession, with massage being listed as one of the top 50 careers, in terms of expected growth in the U.S. in the coming years," explains Kristien Olson, digital media producer at Pacific College of Oriental Medicine, which offers courses in massage. "Employment of massage therapists is expected to grow by 20 percent from 2010 to 2020, faster than the average for all occupations. Continued growth in the demand for massage services will lead to new openings for massage therapists." JULIA WEST

Corporate ransom works to our benefit

RE: "WE MUST PAY THE RICH OR THEY'LL LEAVE US!": It is true we have not much of a choice other than to pay big business and not to mention any of their inappropriate conduct as an example for our young people. Still, this opens the doors for other businesses to compete as well as compensate.
CHARLES POLAND JR., VIA E-MAIL

Party loyalty seems a bit out of whack

RE: "PROUD TO ADVOCATE AGAINST MY INTERESTS": Last Friday Leah Thompson declared loyalty to the GOP, willing to overlook the "few crazies" currently leading the party in favor of its economic message. So Thompson is in favor of lower taxes on the top 0.1 percent, higher taxes on everyone else, an end to the social safety net, and companies free to poison and exploit our children? Strange agenda to support so loyally.
JOSEPH CONNELL, VIA E-MAIL

Gitmo still holds many innocents

Unbelievable! Forty of the people at Guantanamo have been cleared for release since before Obama took office. Meaning they are innocent, of course. Yet after four to eight years they are still being held in prison there! There is no excuse for this in a country that loves justice. CHARLES MICHAEL COUCH, VIA E-MAIL

Liberals want us all in the sweatshops

RE: "TAKING A STAND FOR THE WORKING STIFF": A recent letter writer wants to force right-wing critics of unions to "work in sweatshops 12-16 hours with no A/C or warmth, no health benefits and with no time to be with their loved ones." Apart from the usual desire of lefties like him to force people to do things they would not ordinarily do, what kind of a fool would voluntarily remain in such a work environment? A fool, or maybe someone who would rather have that job than no job at all?
RITCHIE TIEMANN, BOSTON

Dear president, is economy fine or no?

President Obama made a statement about the economy where he said, "the private sector is doing fine." I was just flabbergasted. The president tried to backtrack at another interview but the damage had already been done. My question is: What country is he living in? The private sector is hurting! Just ask the the 23 million Americans out of work and looking for a job. We now have the longest period of 8-plus percent unemployment since the great depression. The policies of the Obama administration just have not worked, not to mention the national debt is way out of control. Americans need change and not the kind of change that is destroying the American economy. FREDERICK R. BEDELL JR., VIA E-MAIL

Evidently there are some — indeed many — in the private sector who are doing very well. Otherwise, how could all those expensive seats in all those arenas be filled for every big-time baseball, football or basketball game; and, more to the point, how else could Romney be vastly outraising Obama from big donors if that wasn't so?

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. When it comes to an arrangement where a collective effort is required to carry things off, it might be left up to you to instill the spirit of togetherness in those involved.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Although you think you're trying very hard to make progress, unless you truly concentrate on doing so, you'll merely be kidding yourself. Focus, focus, focus.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Be patient regarding techniques for achieving steady progress. If you aren't, you'll start to make changes for change's sake and cause yourself all kinds of trouble. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

The future is NOW

Avery Bradley, Rajon Rondo will be featured in the Celtics backcourt for years to come Where will the Celtics find their 'Bigs' and will KG return?

▶ Avery Bradley is poised to take Ray Allen's spot in the starting lineup for good in 2012-13.

3 SUMMER MOVES FOR C'S

1 Re-sign KG

We learned a lot about the 2011-12 Boston Celtics: Their resiliency, their heart, their willingness to work, and the fact that they do have a lot of basketball left in them.

Nobody embodies all of those things more than Kevin Garnett, who is now an unrestricted free agent. Garnett could retire, but if the C's approach him with a contract and plan to remain contenders, he might bite. With Dwight Howard under contract with Orlando, Garnett very well could be the best available big man in this year's free agent class.

The C's have a huge advantage because they have the money to spend this summer and Garnett seemingly now loves Boston.

A one-year deal would be ideal for both sides.

2 More BIGS

Going into next season, the C's have just one big man under contract, JaJuan Johnson, and another due a $1.03 million qualifying offer, Greg Stiemsma.

We already talked about KG returning, but as we saw this season, the C's were beaten badly when he was out of the game. If Garnett is to return, he can't play 35 to 40 minutes as he was in the 2012 postseason. So who is out there to help?

Chris Wilcox could be back on short money. How about Mr. Kardashian himself, Kris Humphries? Other options are New Orleans' Carl Landry and Chris Kaman — and don't forget the draft, as Boston has the 21st and 22nd picks in a deep field.

3 Rondo's team

It's been said numerous times: "The torch has been passed to Rajon Rondo."

This time, it's for real.

It was Rondo who established himself as the best player on the Celtics in the postseason.

Yes, KG was probably more consistent, but Rondo showed that he should be talked about as one of the best guards in the league. It's time for the C's to stop shopping him, and instead find pieces that compliment his game. They'll certainly need a shooter like a Ray Allen (good luck finding a young one of that quality), but the C's need to bring in guys that can run with Rondo and Avery Bradley on the break.

Cup finals

Devils-Kings suddenly a contest

The longer this thing goes, the more the pressure shifts to Los Angeles.

The Kings, who once led the Stanley Cup finals 3-0 over the Devils, have dropped two straight games. The series is 3-2, as the action heads back to Hollywood tonight for Game 6. Only two teams that dug an 0-3 hole in the Cup finals have reached a Game 6. Only one — the 1942 Toronto Maple Leafs — have hoisted the Cup. Adding even more pressure is the fact that Los Angeles has never won the Stanley Cup in the club's 45-year history.

"This is the Stanley Cup final, it isn't supposed to be easy," said the Kings' Justin Williams. "This is a grind. They're a heck of a team over there with a lot of character and a lot of grit."

That grit has some in the New Jersey locker room thinking that a historic comeback is very possible. They believe in themselves. For now, though, the Devils are just taking it one day at a time.

Nava's wild MLB month

Daniel Nava could possibly compete for starting job if his recent hot streak continues ◗ Injuries among Red Sox outfielders giving 29-year-old new life in the majors ◗ Will continue to fight to stay at Fenway Park

The Red Sox called up Daniel Nava one month ago Sunday. Surrounded by reporters that day for his standard "How does it feel to be back?" scrum, he gave the requisite replies.

"Whatever they need," he said. "If today was to sit on the bench and pinch hit or sit on the bench and not play, then so be it."

How about this, Daniel?

Can you become our new leadoff hitter? Can you become the team leader in OPS (entering Saturday, at least)? Can you draw walks at a rate such that only David Ortiz has more on the team after your first month? Can you play stellar defense?

If that is "whatever they need," then Nava has succeeded in a big way. His all-around, outstanding play altered the picture in the Red Sox outfield, so much so that when it came time to drop an outfielder to make room on the roster for Daisuke Matsuzaka, Nava was not even a consideration. The decision came down to Marlon Byrd, an 11-year veteran and one-time All-Star who was hitting .270, or Darnell McDonald, a bench fixture and clubhouse favorite since 2010.

Byrd was designated for assignment Saturday as Nava hit leadoff for the seventh time. He went 0-for-4 but again played a solid left field, an unheralded aspect of Nava's improved play. His full-tilt catch toward the line in the first inning Saturday was one of many he has made on the run and his four assists were tied for second among American League left fielders entering Sunday. Others on the leaderboard were regulars long before Nava came up.

It is not a stretch to say that Nava has provided more in his one month of 2012 than Carl Crawford did in any one-month span of 2011.

Most everyone knows Nava's story. Fails to make team at Santa Clara. Becomes equipment manager. Enrolls in junior college. Becomes an All-American. Wins scholarship at Santa Clara. Earns All-WCC honors. Goes undrafted. Signs with independent Chico Outlaws. Cut by Outlaws. Re-signs with Outlaws. Hits .371. Bought by Red Sox for $1. Rises to majors in less than three seasons. Hits grand slam on first pitch he ever sees in the majors.

The next two years have been split between Pawtucket and Boston. Nava has been a fringe player providing outfield depth in the system. When the big club needs 12 outfielders to get through the first two months of the season due to an unreal rash of injuries, fringe players get their shot. Nava, despite his initial expectations to just "sit on the bench" and do "whatever they need," has made the most of his.

Crawford, Jacoby Ellsbury and Cody Ross will all return at some point. Nava may become a fringe player in the system once again. At the very least, as evidenced by the Byrd/McDonald situation, he has moved up the ladder a bit, continuing a career-long trend of exceeding expectations.

Perhaps even his own.

Opinion

MATT BURKE
SPORTS EDITOR

HAVE FAITH IN DANNY AND RAJON

This unexpected run has changed our expectations about the future of the Celtics. It's squarely on Danny Ainge and Rajon Rondo to keep expectations high.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author, or any opinions expressed on its pages. Opposing viewpoints are welcome. Send 100-word submissions to letters@metro.us.

You would have signed up in mid-December, just prior to this lockout ravaged season, for the Celtics to make it all the way to Game 7 of the Eastern Conference finals. Easily.

But in the words of Doc Rivers, on the day that Kevin Garnett and Ray Allen arrived in Boston, there were monumental changes in Boston's collective mindset regarding the C's way back then and in the months leading up to the end of this wonderful era: "From low expectations, to high expectations, that's what we want. That's exactly what we want."

Whenever you are two or three stops and two or three makes away from reaching the NBA Finals, there is reason to believe that just a "tweaking" of the roster is the best bet.

One can surely believe, however, that Ainge has much larger plans.

The Celtics boss likely believes that his team still has a chance to nab Dwight Howard, someway, somehow. They have enough cash to grab a decent free agent this summer (Eric Gordon, Brook Lopez, Roy Hibbert, Nicolas Batum, Ryan Anderson, JaVale McGee and O.J. Mayo can all be had for the right price) or could wait until next summer to target the likes of Josh Smith (Rondo's old high school buddy). Over the past decade, Ainge has yet to sign a questionable player to a crippling long-term contract. And make no mistake, that is the best thing you can say about any NBA GM.

It's doubtful he will sign a medium-sized fish to a long-term deal. That is the main reason why Kendrick Perkins is not here today. Our expectations for Ainge and the direction of the franchise have changed dramatically from July 2007 to today. Our expectations for Rondo, now unquestionably the new leader of the franchise, have changed dramatically since this past December.

Today, one would sign up for the 2012-13 Celtics to make it back to Game 7 of the Eastern Conference finals. Easily.

More than anyone else, it's up to Ainge and Rondo to make that happen.

"If there comes a time where our goal changes in a year or two, where the goal is to (just) make the playoffs, I think Doc (Rivers) would welcome that challenge, too."

Youk rumored to Pirates

FOXSports reported yesterday that Pittsburgh has talked to the Red Sox regarding a possible trade for Kevin Youkilis. The Sox third baseman is batting .231 this season. METRO

Tense BoSox reeling again

Interleague road trips always offer up some interesting scenarios. This week the Red Sox will play three games in baseball's newest stadium, Marlins Park, and three in its second-oldest, Wrigley Field.

Such oddities might mean something to the Sox, but they shouldn't. Simply put, they need to get it going, anywhere, and one series against the reeling Marlins and another against the crappy Cubs represents an opportunity. Boston has lost six of its last seven after an extra-inning loss Sunday against Washington and are now two games under .500.

Here are three things the club needs to do in order to have a turnaround on the six-game road trip:

1 BREAK OUT THE BATS. The Red Sox hit only .235 during their 1-5 homestand. They faced some great pitching, especially against Washington. Still, a Boston team ranked among the league leaders in most offensive categories playing host to a young NL team should be able to put up more of a fight.

Among the primary culprits is Dustin Pedroia. Since returning from a thumb injury he is 3-for-24 (.125) with an uncharacteristic eight strikeouts, including one to end Sunday's loss with the tying run on first base.

2 SOLVE PEN PROBLEMS. The relief corps, much maligned in April, became a nice story amid a dominant stretch that lasted for several weeks thereafter. Scott Atchison, Andrew Miller and Alfredo Aceves were among those who put up plenty of zeroes. Aceves has become an issue of late, however, and the need is strong for reinforcements.

3 HAVE SOME FUN On the surface, this appears to be a very tight team. Frustration showed in the finale as manager Bobby Valentine was ejected and several others expressed their displeasure with the umpiring.

There's a day off on Thursday, which could help a tad.
